Full Easter Week Slated For Boys by Local YMCA

The Torrance YMCA announced a full program of activities for the boys of Torrance today for the Easter holidays.

The highlight will be the YMCA learn-to-swim campaign for boys 8 to 12, co-sponsored by the Torrance Lions Club and the local YMCA. This program will be operated at the Torrance Municipal Pool from April 15 to 19, and over 250 boys will have the chance to learn to swim. All boys from 8 to 12 are invited to register for the swimming lessons at the YMCA, 2080 Washington Ave.

A huge kite flying contest will start the heavy holiday program for the "Y," and will be held on Saturday, April 13, with over 600 boys expected to participate. Prizes will be awarded for biggest, smallest, funniest, highest flying, and many other types of kites.

Plan Shell Hunt
 After the contest, the boys will take a shell-collecting hike along the Torrance Beach. Kites must be built by the boys themselves, and Y trucks will transport the youngsters to Palos Verdes Park for the meet.

For high school youngsters, the Torrance YMCA has secured a large home at Balboa from April 13 to 20, in order to provide good meals and proper supervision at the popular teen-age resort during the Easter holidays.

Death Valley Trip
 For boys 11 through 16 the "Y" is operating a camping trip to Death Valley from April 15 through the 17th. These boys will sleep under the stars, hike, sightsee, visit Death Valley Scotty's Castle, hold campfires, and explore this interesting national monument.

For boys 8 to 12 Torrance YMCA is conducting an overnight trip to San Diego, with stops at San Juan Capistrano Mission, Scripps Institute of Oceanography, the old Spanish lighthouse, naval air station on North Island, and the famed Balboa Zoo. They will sleep on the grounds of one of San Diego suburban YMCA's during their stay over April 18 and 19.

Student Authors To Stage Their One-Act Dramas

The sixth annual One Act Play Festival will be presented at Torrance High School on Saturday at 8 p.m., with dramas written, directed, and produced by the students themselves.

A number of original plays are written by students and the three best are presented in the competition. This year, the winning playwrights are Jim Weyant, Elso Barlow, and Tom Quaggin. Quaggin is a three-time winner in the play competition, while Weyant won last year.

The winning authors will receive Rosemary DeCamp Playwriting Award Trophies to be presented by Miss DeCamp at a critique immediately following the production. With Miss DeCamp will be two of her fellow cast members on the program—Ann B. Davis, who portrays "Schultzie," and Dwayne Hickman, who portrays "Chuck," Miss DeCamp's TV son.

The plays are "Money Makes the Difference," by Quaggin; "Stay and Die," by Weyant; and "Time for Life," by Miss Barlow. In addition a teaser play, "When Will I Stop?" will be presented. Its authors are Leigh Hunt, Bob Jacobson, Mike Elliot, and Howard Matthews.

Adult tickets for the performance in the THS auditorium are $1, while student tickets are 75 cents. The public is welcome to the critique session afterwards, as well as the plays.
